

HOROSCOPES for 2015

The Year of the Wood Sheep

In 2015, the lunar New Year is February 19

RAT

Rat people should be prepared for major transformations in the Year of the Sheep. It will be a time of rewards and great promises for the Rat, and could include big changes in their lifestyles, such as moving to a new job, a new home or a new relationship. The stars bless the Rat with ample opportunities for making additional income. However he will need to pace himself and be conservative with investment decisions, or he might deplete his energy source. The Rat must make sure he's in control of his financial standing at any given time.

In terms of relationships, the Rat might end long term relationships especially when he feels that these are no longer working. New romance could bud in September. Single Rats are advised to put off any romantic plans until the following year when new relations are better favored. Focusing on career goals instead will be beneficial. It will be important for the Rat to take more time making decisions, big or small, to avoid unfortunate outcomes.

Rat entrepreneurs will experience an uneventful year and do not have to worry about major trouble in business. The Rat's health will be good although accidents are a real threat so he should step up safety precautions when on the road.

It will generally be a successful year for the Rat and concerns that have been troubling him in the past few years will finally be eliminated. The year may be good but the Rat should still stay cautious and moderate in his expectations and endeavors.

OX

This year represents a great challenge to those born in the year of the Ox. This is because the Sheep, the eighth sign in the Chinese zodiac, opposes the Ox, which is the second sign. This may be a complicated year for some, but it won't be for all.

In the traditional Chinese philosophy the ends meet; in other words, what is very negative contains the possibility of being positive. People born in the year of the Ox should follow the course of events with hope and a positive frame of mind. The worse the situations are, the more easily they may become their opposite, and then good fortune will appear.

It may take the better part of the year to accomplish what she is trying to do but the end result will be in her favor. Patience will be required on her part for if she complains or becomes nervous about the way things are going she will lose ground.

Focus, determination and following through with her plans will be a "must" if the Ox wants to reap rewards.

TIGER

At first glance, the energies of the Tiger and the Sheep do not combine. The latter sign is related to the peaceful development of life, in which extremes are avoided, whereas the Tiger has a predisposition for great challenges and a radical approach to life. Therefore it seems that in the Year of the Sheep the Tiger would find it uninteresting. But with the passing of time, he may realize that, on the contrary, the year has become constructive and positive.

A happy family life and a satisfying relationship is in store for the Tiger this year. For the single Tiger, this could be the year for marriage or a new relationship. The Sheep brings the Tiger some probabilities of a job promotion and a chance for moving into the role of superior. The Tiger will exhibit his abilities in dealing with difficulties and in keeping challenging situations under control.

The Tiger needs to exercise prudence this year in terms of his financial spending---risky investments should be avoided. The Tiger's physical and mental health will be one of his best assets. Because of their good health, he tends to have a positive outlook on life, paving the way for good luck.

The Tiger will achieve almost everything he wants if he maintains a correct mental attitude, keeps his creativity high, and does not let his success be driven by blind ambition.

RABBIT

The Year of the Sheep is a favorable year for the Rabbit. The Rabbit should make an effort not to let this potentially excellent period pass by without taking advantage of her many opportunities. The fact that good things begin to happen – even though they are not a product of personal effort but only of good fortune – will have a positive effect on her psyche, and that in turn will tend to improve her situation even more.

Things will open up and her achievements will be plentiful. The way she handles things will bring about positive changes as long as she pays attention to small but important details and remains disciplined. The Year of the Sheep is a particularly auspicious year for launching a new project or business. It's also a good year for investments as her business intuition will be finely tuned under the Sheep's influence. This doesn't mean she can act unwisely. If she keeps her good sense about her, she will be rewarded. There is some predisposition for accidents, especially those related to water.

Even though the balance is clearly positive, there are still a lot of negative stars in the destiny of Rabbits for this year. That means not everything will be a rose garden, but she must never lose heart in difficult moments, for soon everything will be positive again.

This will be a year for all things except to stand still. The more involvement there is in the action, the more possibilities Rabbits will have of living an unforgettable year, one full of events.

DRAGON

Dragons will have to be particularly discreet and alert during the year. The Dragon should sit back and take a bit of a breather during the Year of the Sheep. This would be the time for him to take that much-needed vacation. The Dragon must stick to what he knows best and complete whatever it is he's been working on before starting new ventures. He will gain the most doing what is hardest for him to do: finishing what he's already started.

His creative and innovating attitude will attract success, but he will have to keep within the boundaries of what is reasonable. The Dragon will have to make some concessions now, so that later he can be rewarded with solid success. Financially, the Year of the Sheep will require him to be wise with regard to spending. If he is not careful with his expenses or risky investments, he might find himself ending the year with a negative balance. Likewise, the Dragon must take care to pay attention to his health this year.

The sign of the Dragon is related to high flights of the spirit, while the Sheep is more modest in scope using its energy with discretion. This is a time to pay attention to others and to express affection.

SNAKE

This will be a better year than the previous, but the Snake will still be dealing with obstacles and problems to solve. For now it's a year for her to contemplate and let things settle down. The road to success and happiness is linked to an attitude focused on fulfilling her own tasks, solving her own problems, and not meddling in issues that are specifically other people's affairs.

The Year of the Sheep brings the Snake possibilities of voyages that will change her life positively. Any opportunities for travel should be welcomed with open arms. This will also be a year for cultivating and nurturing relationships that can be of use to her in the future. For her the coast is clear to enjoy herself for a change. But she can't forget that trouble may be brewing at home where she least expects things to go wrong. Any tension that arises the Snake can solve by an honest and enlightening conversation.

This is not the time to conquer new territories at work. The year is not favorable to launching new projects or taking initiatives. The Snake should follow a conservative and defensive strategy. She should keep expenses under control and avoid making large investments.

The Snake's greatest gift is their inner strength. If she can reflect her self-confidence during the Year of the Sheep, wait for what is to come, and not try to force something to happen, then she will be fine.

HORSE

The Horse and the Sheep have a harmonious relationship so 2015 year will be favorable year for the Horse. Although he is a creature of action and adventure, the Horse doesn't often honor his philosophy of freedom. However, during the Year of the Sheep, conditions are in position for this to happen and for his dreams to come true. Opportunities will abound and the Horse will be appreciated for his qualities and actions. Of course, there may be problems, but the positive energy of this year will enable the Horse to overcome them easily. Now is the time for him to make those moves he's been thinking about or plan that special getaway.

For those who are not in a relationship, this year will bring the Horse some possibilities. For those who are married it will be a lively period, although emotions will be running wild. This is the time for the Horse to move any projects forward, being alert to feelings of jealousy that could happen around him. This favorable year will reflect positively on his finances as well although he must continue to monitor his tendency to spend. Health-related issues could be a concern, mostly because the Horse tends to neglect this aspect of his life.

Although it is undisputedly a potential year of good luck, but that doesn't mean that success and happiness are automatically guaranteed. The reins of good fortune must be under control and balanced, so that it doesn't become unmanageable, or even destructive.

SHEEP

Theoretically the Year of the Sheep is favorable to those born under the sign. However, there are some negative aspects appearing in her destiny. Although the positive potential that stems from the fact that this is “her” year still exists, people born in the Year of the Sheep will still have to overcome certain challenges before she will know the good side of destiny. She will have to live discreetly, and immediately solve any problems that may arise.

She should not let her shy demeanor hold her back —the Sheep must step up to the plate and accept the rewards being offered. There will be successes that will answer her prayers. If she doesn’t exert herself in this way, these generous aspects many not come along again.

The Sheep’s hope for new love may not occur in her own year. Instead she should focus on friendships rather than conquering new love interests. Career efforts will pay off well for the Sheep although there will still be a sense of loneliness behind appearances. A careful and wise management of money will pay off for the Sheep this year. She also will experience good health although should be aware of a tendency for accidents, particularly caused by sharp objects.

This is the year for the Sheep to avoid unnecessary provocation or aggressive action that could arouse negative attitudes from others. If this is avoided, no harm will be done.

MONKEY

The year of the Sheep promises to be full of good news for the Monkey, in contrast with the year that preceded it. The whole year will have a good tone to it. It’s time for the Monkey to be proud of his accomplishments. That said, his colorful way of dealing with others will help but he had better have his game plan on paper and his strategy in place. As long as the Monkey executes his ventures well, he will not have to deal with any backlash from supporters.

A marriage this year will be specially blessed. It is also a good year for the Monkey to have children. He is likely to be promoted in his job or to reach some other kind of success. Either way, the Monkey will be in the limelight. Especially during the second half, this year will favorable to the launching of new projects and the beginning of new activities.

There is a threat of robbery in the Year of the Sheep for the Monkey. They must be sure to protect their valuables more cautiously than ever. Money will flow well, especially in the second half of the year, but it too must be guarded carefully.

So that the Year of the Sheep passes without anything concrete to show for it, the Monkey must be disciplined, put in effort and create demanding goals. Then success will be his.

ROOSTER

The Rooster should establish very precise objectives for herself and make an effort to take a step every day (even a very small one) towards the realization of those goals. That is the only way to guarantee her progress. If she leaves everything to chance, she will be placing herself in a position of vulnerability. Then, when problems begin to arise she will spend all her time solving them, but she will reach the end of the year without registering any progress that is worthy of that name.

The Rooster will have some feelings of restlessness that will continue for some years to come. Change is on the horizon and it is important to think about her future and her expectations. The Rooster will be lucky in everything related to affection. She will always find someone who will understand and support her psychologically, stimulating her to carry on towards her goals. This is a good year for the beginning of a new love relationship or for marriage.

It is very important that the Rooster has a wise and conservative strategy with regard to money, especially focused on controlling expenses. If not, problems could arise that might become serious. She must keep stress to a minimum to maintain balance in her life.

The Year of the Sheep will test the strength of the Rooster's self-confidence. The Rooster will have to learn how to deal with difficulties, acting with competence, intelligence, and integrity.

DOG

The Dog will experience more happiness than success during the Year of the Sheep. Love, family life and money issues will be more favored than professional life. Although there are many opportunities this year, he must not lose sight of the fact that a little hard work will be required. If laziness takes over the Dog can forget about making any gains. The true test of his creative ability will unfold this year if he has given his very best.

Not only love, but all personal relations in general will evolve in a very interesting and constructive way. This may be the beginning of a new relationship, a marriage, or simply a happy life. The Dog will need to use his intelligence and clarity to overcome career issues. Reacting with force or under the effect of emotions will not work. The best way for the Dog to attract money in the Year of the Sheep is to not do anything special but let opportunities appear naturally. The Dog needs to keep his finances in order and keep expenses under control.

The natural intelligence and sharp intuition of the Dog will allow them to sense danger before it comes as well as identify success. This will be the Dog's asset during the Year of the Sheep as he will need to keep his eyes wide open.

PIG

The Year of the Sheep will take the Pig in a new direction that promises a better future and a happier existence. Further knowledge or training will be in her best interest leading to professional changes and expansion. She will want to pick up new technology that will enable her to plan for the future and take advantage of opportunities that in the past she had to turn down. This is a year of high creativity and hope for the Pig.

There is a great predisposition for conflict in relationships, and if that tendency is not addressed, it will certainly give rise to problems, which could be serious. There may be enemies who do not show their face to the Pig which makes them hard to counteract. The Pig will need to keep her vigilance high. It's important she manage her money wisely in order to end the year with a positive balance in her checkbook. She should eliminate stress and adopt a healthy life to keep her body and mind in shape.

The Pig should tap into her self-confidence in order to come out victorious. However black the situation may look the Pig must not give up but continue reaching out for help and maintaining a clear will to win.
